► "Strategy-2025: Shaping the EAEU's Future Image.
New Areas and Trends of Cooperation in the EAEU"

Moderators:

Mikhail Myasnikovich,
Chairman of the EEC Board

Discussion points:

The Strategic Directions for Developing the Eurasian Economic Integration until 2025 approved by the Heads of States have laid down a solid foundation for ensuring a new quality of economic development based on harmonizing the interests of state institutions, businesses and citizens. As the Union's key strategic planning document, the Strategy contemplates coordinating the humanitarian agenda in education, healthcare, sports, and tourism apart from traditional economic cooperation areas.

The unprecedented geoeconomic challenges defining the current context for the Eurasian Economic Union's functioning require its participants to dramatically rethink approaches for further deepening of the Eurasian economic integration and sophisticating a systematic policy to support economic growth by encouraging investment and innovation activities, creating sovereign added value chains, manufacturing and technological cooperation with a view to entirely fulfill each State's competition potential.

The emphasis on the integration shaping's human dimension enables designing the Eurasian Economic Union as an association of people, which requires the integration governing bodies to make concerted efforts for supporting the business initiative and ensuring the citizens' social welfare, as well as increasing real income, employment, and labor productivity.

The Strategy-2025 is a reliable tool for the final shaping of the common economic space, which marks its 10th anniversary this turbulent year 2022. Hence, the integration process' success and the Eurasian Economic Union's position on the global stage depend on how efficient will prove the measures and mechanisms contemplated by this strategic document.

The discussion session will enable addressing topical issues of the current and future integration agenda in an unbiased manner, from an external observer's perspective, evaluating the integration process governance quality, and outlining further steps towards deepening the integration interaction of the Eurasian Economic Union countries beyond 2025.

► Digital Modernization of the EAEU Agricultural Sector

Moderators:

Armen Harutyunyan,
Director, EEC Agricultural Policy Department

The sanctions mechanisms introduced in respect of the EAEU Member States have seriously affected the sustainability of the Union's agricultural and food market from both the production and supply chain perspective, thus revealing the need to adopt active measures for developing the digitalization in the agricultural sector. Given the digital modernization peculiarities that have taken shape across the Eurasian space, the main objectives towards developing the digital economy are an accelerated development of digital infrastructure, a large-scale digitalization of the agricultural sector and basic areas of human life, as well as development of the population's digital literacy and educational system modernization with a view to train digital economy professionals.

Shaping the digital environment and relevant infrastructure will enable removing the existing barriers and ensuring the free movement of goods within the Union, as well as raising the efficiency of decision-making. Introducing alternative digital solutions will positively influence the banking sector's inclusion and transparency, enabling to increase the portfolio of financial, insurance, leasing and other services for the EAEU countries' agricultural businesses.

Joint efforts and the entire set of measures adopted in this direction will help bring the agriculture to a new development level, increase the output of competitive agricultural raw materials and products, as well as ensure the EAEU food security.

Outlook

Moderators:

Andrey Belyaninov,
Secretary General, Assembly
of Peoples of Eurasia

Umetalieva Zarina,
Advisor to the First Deputy Chairman of the Cabinet of Ministers of the Kyrgyz Republic

The issue of the Eurasian integration ideology is in the air, however, still far from being resolved. Every former Soviet Union state generates its own national idea.

The Eurasian integration is currently considered to be purely economic, providing for the development of a common market and a common economic space. To implement the Strategic Directions for Developing the Eurasian Economic Integration until 2025, mechanisms of strategic planning, industrial cooperation promotion, development and implementation of joint investment programs and projects, collaboration in science, technology, education, healthcare, tourism and sports are envisaged. The single market is complemented by the generation of common guidelines for macroeconomic policy, coordination of industrial and agricultural policies.

At the same time, the trends of the former Soviet republic economies disintegration are yet to be overcome. In all of them, except the Republic of Belarus, the scope of mutual trade is much lower than the foreign trade with the third countries which provide for the major part of direct foreign investments. Each of the EAEU states is experiencing the strong impact of the neighboring centers of power – China, the European Union, Turkey, as well as the USA. The desired scenario for the long-term development of the EAEU 2030, which provides for establishing its own center of power, has not yet been implemented. In fact, our economy is developing as per the inertial scenario, its weight in the global and Eurasian economy continues declining.

The adverse impact of the educational and linguistic system disintegration is increasingly perceivable – the powerful cultural and spiritual intervention of external ideology systems creates new lines of tension in the society.

The economic rationality alone is obviously not enough for the further development and deepening of the EAEU. Non-economic factors that stimulate the integration processes to deepen shall be activated, and they are to be taken to a new quality level. This requires the members of the economic community to synthesize the Eurasian Idea serving both as a measure of the integration process quality and as a strategic reference point.

What is meant by the current Eurasian Idea and what is its role in strengthening economic integration within the EAEU? How shall the common cultural, historical, spiritual and linguistic heritage be updated, subordinated to the goals of inclusive development? What represents the optimal non-discriminatory state cooperation model and what ideology tools does the concept of the Greater Eurasian Partnership provide therefor?

Main Directions of Industrial Cooperation: Major Trends, Implementation Tools, Challenges and Risks

Moderator:

Sergei Katyrin, President of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry of the Russian Federation

Stable and sustainable economic growth can be secured by a diversified economy only, supported by a highly-developed real sector, primarily manufacturing industry.

Strengthening the cooperation between the EAEU Member States in the manufacturing industry sector is a priority for the Eurasian Economic Union.

It shall be noted that it is integration in the real economy that has allowed the EAEU countries to start a new path of economic growth and become its main driver in the recent years.

In 2021, this EAEU sector has shown high rates of manufacturing industry production increased by 5% compared to the previous year. Cooperated deliveries of manufacturing industry products to the EAEU have increased by 40%.

The EAEU advantages and potential shall be used more actively to bring industrial complexes closer to the highest international standards in the near future.

Interaction Between the EAEU and Promising International Partners: Mutually Beneficial Cooperation in The Greater Eurasia.

Moderators:

Kirill Barsky,
 Ambassador-at-Large of the Russian Foreign Ministry,
 Senior Official of the Russian Federation at the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Forum

Since the start of EAEU functioning, a fairly extensive infrastructure for its international activities has been created. The interaction geography covers foreign countries, territorial integration associations in various regions of the world – from Latin America and Africa to Southeast Asia, as well as key dedicated and broadly-focused international organizations.

Along with that, the quality of international activities is directly related to the integration development within the EAEU and the pace of achieving the goals and objectives defined by the Treaty on the EAEU and Strategy-2025.

What are the emerging opportunities for the EAEU international activities in the context of the changing economic architecture of the world, as well as new challenges of the global economy?

What are the relevant focus points for the major players in the Greater Eurasia, and how can the concept of the Greater Eurasian Partnership be updated? What are the potential benefits of the EAEU interaction with the traditional partners, with whom the cooperation has already been formalized, as well as new partners, including outside the Greater Eurasia?

What requests do the business circles formulate in the context of the EAEU dialogue with external partners? What initiatives can make a breakthrough and ensure the highest effect from international activities for both the EAEU Member States and its international partners?

The Role of Exchange-Traded Financial Instruments Denominated in the National Currencies of the EAEU Member States in Stimulating Economic Development

Moderators:

Arman Khachatryan,
Director of the Financial Policy Department of the Eurasian Economic Commission

Danov Sergey,
Director for Integration of
Capital Markets of the EAEU,
Moscow Exchange

The establishment of a single EAEU financial market and the creation of a common exchange system within the EAEU are priority areas of integration cooperation. According to experts, the functioning of the single financial market will result in an increase in the share of the EAEU Member States' total financial assets, the share of mutual investments, a rise in the capitalization of the stock market to GDP and a growth in the amount of exchange trading in the EAEU.

The common exchange system will significantly expand mutual trade and investment cooperation between our countries, increase cross-border activities of market participants and the use of financial instruments denominated in national currencies.

EAEU Digital Development as the Key to Efficient Integration

Moderator:

Dmitry Shedko,
Aide to the Chairman of the
EEC Board

Like any technology revolution, digitalization drastically changes the life around us, affecting all areas of human life.

The results achieved today in the EAEU digitalization can be considered as visual performance indicators of the decisions taken in terms of the implementation rate, scale, and priority of the digital projects. However, further development of the EAEU digital agenda naturally requires lifelong updating of the managerial decisions in the digital sector and improvement of their implementation approaches in consideration of global trends and challenges against the backdrop of a rapidly changing world.

Therefore, we require constant rethinking and expansion of the EAEU digital agenda priorities. Currently, in the context of the ICT potential rapidly increased by the countries of the world, the issues of digital sovereignty loom large.

Speakers:

Arshak Kerobyan, Head of the Digitalization Department of the Ministry of High-Tech Industry of the Republic of Armenia;

► Practical Considerations of Developing an Integrated Foreign Exchange Market in the EAEU. The Union Member States' National Currency Direct Exchange Rate Generation Mechanisms. Ways to Expand the Use of the EAEU Member States' National Currencies in Mutual Trade Settlements

Moderators:

Murychev Aleksandr,
Vice-president for financial policy and development of economy sectors of the RSPP

The objective of establishing the EAEU integrated currency market is defined by the Treaty on the Eurasian Economic Union dated May 29, 2014. The accelerated integration of the currency markets in the EAEU countries is essential for ensuring sovereignty and stabilizing the economy.

The key considerations in establishing the EAEU integrated currency market include ensuring unhindered mutual access of financial market participants – residents of the EAEU countries to each other's organized currency markets; development of mechanisms for national currency direct exchange rate generation; efficient coordination of the national (central) banks' exchange rate policy, as well as measures to increase the liquidity of the internal currency markets in the EAEU countries.

There are currently no regulatory barriers to settlements in national currencies in the EAEU States, as well as no need to take administrative measures in this direction.

To increase the number of settlements in national currencies, the utilization of financial products denominated in national currencies shall be stimulated, work shall be intensified to ensure the direct conversion of currency pairs and the establishment of a common payment space in the EAEU, to accelerate the development of mutual trade and financial flows between our countries, to reduce non-tariff barriers, as well as to actively organize the common EAEU markets, including energy markets.

Moderators:

Korol Andrei,
Rector of the belarusian state university

Musaev Abdylida,
Rector of the Bishkek State University named after K. Karasaeva

The cooperation in vocational education is contemplated by the Strategic Directions for Developing the Eurasian Economic Integration until 2025. The mechanisms for implementing the Strategy-2025 in this field are aimed at further developing the single labor market in the EAEU. One of the efficient ways to train qualified personnel for the single EAEU labor market is the organization of scientific and educational consortia of universities in the specialization areas. The EAEU countries face the task of developing adaptive models for the interuniversity cooperation and flexible organizational and legal forms therefor. In a global sense, the establishment of a single EAEU vocational education system is an important strategic perspective.

► E-commerce: a Pillar of the EAEU Single Market Infrastructure

Moderator:

Aibek Kurenkeev, President of the Association of Electronic Commerce of the Kyrgyz Republic

The Commission, together with the Eurasian Economic Union Member States, is working to create favorable conditions for the development of e-commerce on the territory of the Eurasian Economic Union.

In this work as well as to overcome the "lagging regulation", when barriers resulting from the lack of regulations are subsequently eliminated through administrative measures, the development of supranational e-commerce regulation is underway and the establishment of voluntary associations of professional e-commerce participants in the EAEU is being considered, including national industry associations, Internet platforms, online stores and individual sellers.

Simultaneously, to form a stable all-Union e-commerce infrastructure independent from the external factors, a number of priority issues need to be addressed, in particular, logistics and barrier-free payments in national currencies.

Tourism Industry – a New Economic Cooperation Expansion Round

Moderator:

Azamat Zhamankulov, Minister of Culture, Information, Sports and Youth Policy of the Kyrgyz Republic

In accordance with the Strategic Directions for Developing the Eurasian Economic Integration until 2025, approved by the Heads of the EAEU Member States at the meeting of the Supreme Eurasian Economic Council on December 11, 2020, one of the economic cooperation directions is tourism.

The Union countries hold significant cultural and natural potential for the promotion of tourism as a means of achieving one of the Union's goals – creating conditions for the stable development of the Member States' economies in the interests of improving the living standards of their population by creating jobs, developing related sectors of the economy, and increasing mutual investment between the Member States.

One of the promising directions in developing the tourism industry is the medical tourism. In this light, using medical rehabilitation and resort centers' potential in creating tourist routes within the EAEU becomes especially relevant.

In the context of the global economy, the tourism industry is one of the most dynamic and highly profitable. However, the crisis phenomena of recent years have caused tourism to slouch through an overall recession.

The potential of Eurasian integration can become a factor in overcoming the crisis phenomena in the industry.

Moderators:

Yuri Lavrinenko,
Deputy Chairman of the
Presidium of KAZLOGISTICS
Union of Transport and Logistics Organizations and Associations

Currently, in the post-pandemic environment, all the countries of Greater Eurasia are focused on implementing transit and logistics potentials that ensure the connectivity of the territories, transport multimodality, full-scale digitalization and sustainable mobility of the population.

In addition, in the context of recent challenges, the task of highest importance for the EAEU countries is the establishment of new logistics routes and supply chains providing resource flows for the development of economies. This implies significant work on implementing projects aimed at the creation and development of international transport corridors forming the groundwork for successful economic integration and enabling the efficient conversion of the state's transit functions. Building a supporting road network within the EAEU will also be essential. Ensuring the sustainable functioning of the EAEU transport complexes in the current conditions will become a key discussion point.

Prospects for the Establishment of Energy Corridors in the EAEU Countries

Moderator:

Vladimir Bobylev, Editor-in-chief of the Neft I Kapital magazine

In the context of international challenges, the increasing crisis of the global economy and sanctions pressure, the issues of ensuring the energy security of the EAEU Member States, independence from external circumstances, processes and factors threatening their sustainable development are becoming particularly relevant.

In the current environment, integration processes in the energy sector are becoming extremely topical, the role and value of the common energy resources markets in the EAEU five countries and their coordinated energy policy implementation are strengthening.

Primarily, this involves the efficient use of the aggregate energy potential through the creation of competitive energy markets. Along with that, the efforts of the Member States will focus on issues related to the resource base generation within the EAEU, the forecast of supply and demand, attracting investments in the energy sector, security of energy supply and the development of new technologies.

A business dialogue with the representatives of the major energy companies is also planned on the prospects of private business investment in projects for the expansion and development of oil and gas transportation infrastructure, import substitution in the energy sector, as well as expansion of export potential by redirecting hydrocarbon export flows.

participants. It becomes obvious that, against the background of the global economy turbulence acceleration, even the most challenging problems are easier to overcome together, as is the coordinated improvement of the EAEU five countries' economic stability. In this situation, constant updates and improvements are required to ensure the smooth functioning of the internal market and the fulfillment of its potential as a non-alternative vector of competitive and sustainable EAEU Member States development.

A need has arisen to adjust the existing mechanisms and implement other new system solutions for the further medium- and long-term integration of the EAEU in general and particularly domestic markets; clarification of goals, objectives and stages in terms of ensuring the four freedoms.

► EAEU Jewelry Agenda: Results, Outlook, Opportunities

The Eurasian Economic Union's agenda is actively filled with the issues of the jewelry market development in the countries participating in the integration association, in consideration of the global trends that have formed in the current global jewelry market.

These encompass the digitalization of the jewelry industry, which includes jewelry labeling, traceability, and e-commerce, an increase in the share of branded jewelry, and cooperation of the global jewelry industry.

Nowadays, against the background of the expanding unprecedented economic and financial sanctions applied in international trade, precious metals, precious stones and jewelry play a conventional role as a secure asset for the population and the country. Moreover, the export of jewelry products being an integral part of the unique culture, traditions and image of the Member States of the Eurasian Integration Association ensures the general promotion of the EAEU agenda.

To minimize the adverse effect of the imposed trade restrictions within the EAEU jewelry agenda, a course has been taken to implement the potential of the shared jewelry market and reorient trade export flows in favor of promising markets.
